PRIVILEGED INSTRUCTIONS

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
REPUBLIC OF KYRGYZSTAN

Кыргыз Республикасынын
Тышкы иштер министрлиги

Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Kyrgyz Republic

Privileged Instructions

Fundamental Principles

- Kyrgyzstan will not relinquish control over any current sovereign territory, regardless of the framework agreements that might be crafted at this UN-supported summit. It is a Red Line for us to openly agree to any final arrangement that surrenders sovereign Kyrgyz territory.
- Kyrgyz water supplies are to be used for our people, livestock, and arable land. We will not ship water beyond our borders for others to use in what will no doubt be irresponsible ways. Exporting our water resources is a Red Line and will not be entertained. However, if any proposals include marshaling water resources inside the Kyrgyz Republic, sent by other nations into holding reservoirs with water filtration and other treatment options, which might later be exported through a strict monitoring regime, the delegation is authorized to pursue such opportunities. Chinese expertise and technology supporting this initiative would be welcome. No final agreement may be made at this summit. Rather, report all findings, and the framework being offered, to the Foreign Minister.

Principle Negotiation Positions

These positions are to be presented openly and publicly to all attendees. However, the delegation should pursue the specific items outlined below, either bilaterally or multilaterally, and should ensure Kyrgyzstan's red lines are not crossed in any diplomatic agreements that might be presented, discussed, or aggressively pursued.

- We are open to dialogue addressing the shared use of water resources in the region. The delegation will listen to all proposals that equitably address this issue.
- The Kyrgyz people welcome the participation of all nations attending the summit, and we are eager for extensive bilateral and multilateral dialogue to address these two core issues, but perhaps many others as well as this UN-sponsored and supported summit offers all attendees an excellent opportunity to enhance our shared understanding of the Central Asian region.

These positions are to be held by the Kyrgyz delegation but should not be openly communicated except as outlined below.

- Our security is imperative. Hence, negotiation of security arrangements that support our inherent right to self-defense and maintenance of territorial integrity will be entertained. The delegation does not have authority to enter into binding agreements in this regard, but establishing possible security arrangements and broad points that might be part of such agreements acquired during the negotiations is strongly encouraged.

- We will not enter any intelligence sharing agreements with any nation attending the summit. However, if the People's Republic of China is willing to share intelligence on Tajikistan or Uzbekistan, further dialogue on these points would be of interest. No discussions of these possibilities will take place except in bilateral discussions with the Chinese delegation. This is a Red Line. No other nations can know about this initiative.
- Kyrgyzstan's water is for the Kyrgyz people. While openly supporting diplomatic discussions on water resources and shared management of this vital resource, the delegation is directed to ensure water resources inside Kyrgyzstan are not plundered for use by other nations less focused on protecting and conserving their own water resources. While Chinese technical expertise in water resource management would be welcome, no strings may be attached to this assistance should the delegation succeed in brokering any arrangements with the People's Republic of China.

Delegation Instructions

Ensure periodic reports, requests for further guidance, or clarifications to the instructions herein are submitted to the office of the Foreign Minister.

General: The delegation will work closely with and support the UN Special Representative of the Secretary-General's efforts to mediate this crisis. The delegation is directed to collect all available information about the negotiating positions of the other countries at the summit. Where possible, ascertain the other nation's flexible areas and try to bend the countries toward agreeing to Kyrgyz interests. The end goal of this summit for Kyrgyzstan is to reduce tensions and to return to the status quo regarding border demarcations and protection of Kyrgyzstan's water resources.

UZBEKISTAN

The Republic of Uzbekistan has demonstrated remarkable maturity and understanding over the many issues between our nations. While they are not to be trusted entirely at face value, the Foreign Ministry is interested in all proposals that might be offered by the Uzbek delegation. The Foreign Minister is particularly interested in Uzbek border demarcation proposals, confidence-building measures, and mechanisms that will mutually enhance border security for both nations. While Uzbekistan is not a signatory to the CSTO, and we are considering withdrawing as the Russian Federation has proven to be a weak guarantor of security for CSTO allies, Uzbekistan does offer a unique partner for a new security arrangement in the region. The delegation is directed to seek proposals from the Uzbeks regarding security issues separate and distinct from the primary topic of border demarcation. Uzbekistan has also built robust economic partnerships through Kazakhstan with the People's Republic of China. The delegation is directed to explore adding us to these economic arrangements, with an emphasis on the sectors of oil, natural gas, mining and minerals, agriculture, manufacturing, and energy. Should other opportunities be presented; to include within IT and cyber security, the delegation should also acquire all meaningful information and potential agreements from the Uzbek delegation. Make no final agreements on any topic but establish the main parameters of any arrangement that is of strong interest to the Uzbeks. Report all findings to the Foreign Ministry for follow-on guidance.

KAZAKHSTAN

The Republic of Kazakhstan, our northern neighbor, remains aligned with our interests within both the CSTO and the EAEU. However, our government has heard rumblings that Kazakhstan may pull out of the CSTO. If this happens, we might also benefit from the timing of such an announcement. The delegation is empowered to explore the Kazakh delegation's position on this topic, and, privately, might offer the possibility we are also considering the same action. Doing so in partnership would be the ideal approach as there is strength in numbers. Kazakhstan might also prove to be a good partner in any new regional security organization that might be created among the five Central Asian nations. In addition to security opportunities, Kazakhstan has a robust economic partnership with both Uzbekistan and the PRC, and the delegation should engage the Kazakhs regarding areas where mutual economic benefit might be realized; all sectors are open for discussion. Finally, Kazakhstan's diplomatic weight supporting our border demarcation positions, and water resource management would strengthen our negotiating positions vis-à-vis both Tajikistan and Uzbekistan. The delegation should seek to garner Kazakh support for our positions on both issues. Kazakhstan is in the greatest need of water resources, and we may be able to help, under the right conditions. Report all findings to the Foreign Ministry and await further guidance.

TAJIKISTAN

The Tajiks are at fault for most of the issues linked to both our border security and for our nation's water resource management challenges. The delegation is directed to be openly friendly and accommodating to the Tajik delegation and should aggressively seek the Tajiks' detailed proposals. Use negotiating time to extract as much information from the Tajik delegation as possible, across all areas of interest, to include the border situation as they view it, water resources, economic opportunities across the Central Asian region and embedded within the PRC's Belt and Road Initiative, and the security situation vis-à-vis the other attendees. However, do not agree to any arrangement with the Tajiks. Lead them along and attempt to persuade them to show their true intentions. Report all findings to the Foreign Ministry, including security issues, which will be relayed to the Ministry of Defense.

PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

The People's Republic of China has boosted our economic vitality through Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) and through infrastructure projects that are part of their Belt and Road Initiative (BRI). The delegation is directed to pursue additional FDI opportunities while in talks with the Chinese delegation, and to seek their views on additional BRI initiatives in Kyrgyzstan that would be mutually beneficial to both nations. However, our government is not interested in arrangements that require us to fund infrastructure projects that are mutually beneficial to both nations. Such projects should be jointly funded and should use far more Kyrgyz laborers than Chinese laborers. Chinese supervisors with the technical expertise to manage such projects are encouraged, but workers on projects inside Kyrgyzstan must be predominantly Kyrgyz. China also leads the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, and the delegation is directed to speak privately with the Chinese delegation about that organization supplanting the EAEU framework to more appropriately, comprehensively, and effectively bolster regional economic development. Finally, just as the delegation is directed to explore arms purchases from the Russian delegation, so too should the delegation carry out private discussions with the Chinese delegation for arms exports from China that would improve our military and strengthen our security. No official deals may be agreed upon, but negotiating the overarching framework for such an agreement is authorized. Finally, in private, one-on-one discussions between the delegation head and the PRC's head of delegation, raise the option of an intelligence sharing arrangement focused on Tajik and Uzbek challenges to our security. No final agreements may be crafted but discover where the Chinese delegation stands on this option and report back to the Foreign Minister all relevant information—the more complete the information, the better.

RUSSIA

The Russian Federation remains a CSTO ally and nominally the guarantor of security for us within the framework of that treaty. The reality is much more complicated and the Foreign Minister, along with the rest of the cabinet ministers and the president, no longer views Russia favorably in this regard. The delegation is, however, to remain openly appreciative and agreeable with the Russian delegation over security issues linked to the CSTO. Through this affiliation, seek the Russian delegation's support for our border sovereignty and protection of our water resources. Additionally, within bilateral-only discussions, dissuade the Russians from continuing to support Tajikistan over both border demarcation claims and the Tajik's excessive claims regarding regional water rights. Should any sort of confidence-building measures be offered regarding the borders, the Fergana Valley, or other topics that include Russian troops deployed into Kyrgyzstan, the delegation should openly and without hesitation reject such an arrangement. On the topic of economics, while Russia's EAEU has been helpful over time, that economic agreement is also suboptimizing our economic potential in the larger Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) and the delegation should explore, openly, the potential to replace the EAEU with a more robust SCO arrangement to broadly benefit, economically, the entire region. We are interested in upgrading our military equipment with Russian export-variant arms, but the delegation is merely directed to explore what options the Russians might make available to the Ministry of Defense in this regard. Collect all available information and report back to the Foreign Ministry.

INDIA

The Republic of India is an interesting participant in this summit. Our government has little direct interaction with the Indians, and other than Russia and India being diplomatically aligned, even sharing defense production interests, we have little need for India. Nevertheless, India could serve as a "stalking horse" in negotiations with the Chinese delegation. It is clear China's BRI is designed to isolate India to the greatest extent possible on the continent of Asia, and that is especially true in Central Asia. Our government understands that the region has become vitally important to China's long-term goal of creating an economic union from the Pacific to the Atlantic encompassing the European Union as a partner. Thus, the delegation is authorized to engage in direct dialogue with India to see what offers may be on the table that would benefit both us and India, but also would not raise Beijing's ire. This includes private discussions about purchasing Indian-made arms, munitions, et al. Discussions about arms purchases should only be made between heads of delegation in private, bilateral talks. Report all findings to the Foreign Ministry once acquired.

There may be times when the Foreign Minister is unable to respond immediately to your communication. Under those circumstances, the delegation should proceed as directed in this guidance.
