PRIVILEGED INSTRUCTIONS

ΚΥΠΡΙΑΚΗ ΔΗΜΟΚΡΑΤΙΑ
ΥΠΟΥΡΓΕΙΟ ΕΞΩΤΕΡΙΚΩΝ

REPUBLIC OF CYPRUS
MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Privileged Instructions

Fundamental Principle:

- The full integration of the Turkish-held areas of Cyprus into the Republic of Cyprus

Desired End States:

- A bicommunal nation with a strong federal government.
- The codification of a single nation within which peoples freely invest in a single Cypriot community, personality, and heritage.
- A strong, fully representative central government.
- Complete demilitarization of our nation.
- An ending of all agreements that bind our nation to any other nation or organization without the full consent of the people of the Republic of Cyprus.

Delegation Instructions

Ensure periodic reports, requests for further guidance, or clarifications to the instructions herein are submitted via message to the office of the Foreign Minister.

GENERAL: The Republic of Cyprus exists as an internationally recognized nation. The division that occurred is the direct result of external actors that influenced the Turkish Cypriot community. Our historic ties, and relations with, the Turkish Cypriot community demonstrate that we, as Cypriots, can handle our own internal affairs. Outside influences have created a rift that cannot be mended in its current state.

- The solution to the Cyprus Question is sought through peace talks held under the auspices of the United Nations as part of the UN Secretary-General's good offices mission.
- The aim is to reach a comprehensive and lasting solution in accordance with the Charter and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, which will lead to the transformation of the unitary State into a bicommunal, bizonal federation with a single sovereignty, single citizenship and single international personality, with political equality as set out in the relevant UN Security Council resolutions.
- The solution must provide for the complete withdrawal of all foreign troops, the abolition of the anachronistic guarantee system, the withdrawal of the settlers and the guarantee of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all Cypriots. It must further guarantee the unity of the State, institutions, society and the economy and must be in line with the European acquis and fully respect the principles on which the European Union is based.
- We envision a free and reunited Cyprus, a common homeland of Greek-Cypriots, Turkish-Cypriots, Armenians, Maronites and Latins (Roman Catholics), a model of peaceful coexistence and prosperity of all its citizens and a pillar of stability, peace and security in the Eastern Mediterranean.

GOVERNANCE

The Turkish Cypriots propose that our nation cease to exist upon any implementation of a settlement or peace agreement. They feel the new nation be composed of the illegal and unrecognized entity called “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” and the Greek Cypriot state. This “virgin birth” proposal is a deal breaker. The Republic of Cyprus already exists and is internationally recognized. The Turkish Cypriot portion simply needs to be re-integrated into the existing Cypriot state.

Push for integration of the Turkish Cypriot region back into our nation through a deliberate process over time. Through a mutually agreed upon process, both sides can work towards addressing the concerns of their communities. Ensure that you are addressing the long-term concerns of our peoples over territory, residency, and property rights. These must be addressed in order to move forward on any governance.

RED LINE: International recognition of the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” and any suggestion of a “virgin birth” proposal for a unified Cyprus.

POWER SHARING

Federal versus State: Turkish Cypriots insist on transferring many federal-level responsibilities and positions to the state-level. Areas such as airports, seaports, customs, banking, etc. are considered state-level in their eyes. Fears of a strong federal government with divided leadership will deadlock and not function and these areas will be affected. This may have been true in the 1960s but today we must build governmental structures that carry out the will of all the people of Cyprus, not just a small minority population. Appropriate safeguards should be designed to address concerns of the Turkish Cypriots, as well as other minority groups such as Armenians, Latins and Maronites. There is no need for duplicate institutions and structures at both the federal and state levels.

RED LINE: A confederation system where there is a weak federal government versus strong state governments.

The Federal Executive: The composition of a united government remains deadlocked over the composition of the executive branch. Turkish Cypriots appear to prefer a Senate-elected President and Vice-President and advocate for a rotating system. They desire that both offices rotate between communities every three years.

We advocate for presidential elections where the President and Vice-President are on “one ticket” to represent a whole slate of principles. A direct popular vote for the office of the President is desired. But we could consider a Senate-elected Vice-President as an acceptable compromise in order to get agreement on a popular vote for President.

Rotating between communities for the presidency removes the power of the electorate and disenfranchises them. They would have no voice in determining our nation’s executive.

RED LINE: The office of President must be elected by popular vote.

SECURITY AND GUARANTEES

Guarantees for the security of Cyprus are currently held within the Treaty of Guarantee and the Treaty of Alliance. Both treaties are overseen by the Guarantor Powers of Greece, Türkiye, and the United Kingdom. Their very existence currently has no place in a united Cyprus. The UN has proposed these treaties be replaced by a new treaty between a united Republic of Cyprus along with Greece and Türkiye. They prescribe a new set of mechanisms to address inter-communal issues where two communities cannot easily deal with them alone.

Language in the Treaty of Guarantee was used by Türkiye to justify their illegal invasion in 1974. Our stance is that any outside nation imposing itself as a guarantor on the sovereign Republic of Cyprus ended with the passing of the colonial era. No other nation would agree to a similar treaty. Subsequently the Treaty of Alliance was established for the common defense of the island. The current forces on Cyprus were never emplaced as part of this treaty. All foreign militaries must be removed from our nation. There is no external threat, save for Türkiye, that threatens our nation.

In your talks with the SRSg attempt to draft an outline proposal agreement that includes the UN, as well as Greece and Türkiye, to help deal with current issues. No military component need be addressed except for terms regarding unexpected military attacks. Expect the Turkish Cypriots will insist on the "right of military intervention". This may be a consideration if it is limited to the boundaries of their constituent state.

RED LINE: The right of military intervention by any outside state is unacceptable.

POPULATION

The island's population has undergone significant shifts. Our position is that a full and complete census of the entire island, by an external non-partisan organization be conducted. There is no way to fully agree on population-driven political and social programs without the true number of actual Cypriots. Turkish immigrants and Turkish soldiers must be identified as to not skew the population figures and bias any true agreements.

We strongly feel that the Turkish immigrants violate the Fourth Geneva Convention which prohibits an occupying power from willfully transferring its own population to the occupied area. We consider this a war crime against our republic. Understanding how many immigrants there are will determine how large the repatriation back to Türkiye is.

We have to be cognizant of accurate numbers because of our European Union status. Resolving this issue has ramifications on the EU's acquis communautaire regarding individual freedoms, specifically the right of Greek Cypriots to live, own businesses, buy property, and vote within the Turkish Cypriot community. The growing economic disparity between our communities is cause for concern by the Turkish Cypriots. They fear that when unification happens, they will be purchased out of land and businesses by Greek Cypriots. Any limitations on these freedoms can only be temporary, never permanent.

When it comes to residency requirements for local area elections there is room for compromise. For example, a Greek Cypriot moving to a Turkish community must maintain a legal residence for a minimum of 10-years before being granted the right to vote in local elections within that community. Otherwise, they must return to their prior residence to vote in their local elections.

None of the finer details can be worked out without a fully transparent census of the Turkish north. Once complete then specific discussions can occur. If there is resistance, offer that an entire island census can be conducted by a mutually agreed independent agency.

CONFIDENCE BUILDING MEASURES

Confidence building must be a continuous process along with the other issues listed above. Expect the leading advocates to be the United States and United Kingdom. We should be prepared to respond.

Direct Trade Regulation and Turkish EU Accession

In our accession into the European Union, in 2004, the European Commission approved a Direct Trade Regulation (DTR) to allow Turkish Cypriots the privilege of direct export to EU member states at reduced customs rates. As a member of the EU our leaders eventually blocked implementation of the DTR by arguing that the regulation required consensus of all member states. We stated that by not using Greek Cypriot ports and payment of external EU custom and port duties that it legitimized the illegal state of the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus". In response Türkiye refused to implement provisions in the Ankara Protocol it had signed in 2005. Our government ultimately blocked Türkiye's accession into the EU.

We have no wish to prevent Türkiye's accession into the EU. However, leaders must understand that any precursor to our removal of these blocks begins with withdrawal of all Turkish troops from our nation. When Ankara can genuinely help achieve peace then we will remove all blocks to their accession process. This is an area where we can possibly compromise if shown the proper confidence building measures.

Varosha, Famagusta Port, and Ercan Airport

Turkish Cypriots hold Varosha as a bargaining chip for future settlement. The suburban coastal area was developed into one of the most attractive tourist locations in the Mediterranean prior to the Turkish invasion. It has fallen into disrepair, but Turkish Cypriots have slowly attempted to reopen the area for development since 2020. Offers for redevelopment, for Greek Cypriot owners of properties seized during the partitioning of our country, have been empty as the Turkish Cypriots demand continued control of the city. Thus, we have rejected these offers.

Since 2020 nearly a half-million visitors visited Varosha. The North has begun developing commercial use of the area in defiance to the original owners of the properties. UNFICYP raised this issue to the Turkish Cypriot authorities, but the UN announced that the situation is unchanged.

On Famagusta, Turkish Cypriots desire that it become a port open for trade with EU member states. As with the rest of Varosha, the north has begun developing it. Until our citizens can reclaim their rightful property any discussion on Famagusta is impotent. We will not ease our pressure on Türkiye and the Turkish Cypriots until they cease redevelopment or compensate Greek Cypriot property owners for their loss.

Ercan Airport is located in the Turkish Cypriot area. We refuse to recognize its existence as a viable port of entry into Cyprus. We will act against any nation that offer direct flights into the north. We demonstrated this against Azerbaijan in 2005 over a single flight from Baku. Only direct flights from Türkiye can land at Ercan. Any Turkish Cypriot authority in control of passports, visas, customs, and trade through Ercan is illegitimate and illegal.

Note: The United States Government does not recognize the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus." Usage of the terms "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" and "TRNC" in this exercise, being administered by the United States Army War College, is used for educational purposes only and does not reflect a contradiction to the United States Government official stance.
