PRIVILEGED INSTRUCTIONS

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
REPUBLIC OF KOREA

Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Privileged Instructions

Fundamental Principles

- Establishment of peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula.
- North Korea must either become a responsible, nonthreatening, independent nation; or seek to work with our nation to reunify the Korean peninsula as a single Korean nation.

Desired End States

- Denuclearization of North Korea.
- Reduce the DPRK's military complex to levels commensurate with normal, non-nuclear, self-defense needs, and reduce the military's dominant influence within the government to a position proportionate with that of modern nations.
- A North Korean state in complete compliance with international norms, willing to integrate itself into international organizations and multinational agreements and treaties.
- A North Korean state that can be trusted to adhere to both the spirit and substance of all agreements entered.
- The establishment of peace agreement between our nation, the United States, and North Korea to end the Korean War.
- A DPRK open to normal economic trade and investment to greatly improve the health and welfare of all North Koreans and bring their nation into the 21st century.
- A resumption of inter-Korean talks aimed at the eventual reunification of the peninsula as a single, strong Korean nation.

Principal Negotiation Positions

- BAD BEHAVIOR WILL NOT BE REWARDED.
- Retain a close allegiance to the United States and Japan in terms of demanding that the DPRK must agree to resolve all issues and implement resolutions prior to any actions being taken to relieve sanctions. We also reserve the right, in consultation with our allies, to act bilaterally in direct negotiations with the DPRK if doing so might create a better path toward the resolution of their crisis, but also for the longer-term relationship between our brothers to the north.
- Confidence-building is an essential first step in the renewal of talks.
- While we can advocate a return to the tenets of the 2005 Joint Resolution as a foundation for further negotiations, we cannot be tied to what had been a failed attempt if there is no immediate, substantial, and sustained progress.

- North Korea must negotiate in good faith and ensure its positions, all compromises or changes or adjustments to those positions, and any, and all agreements entered are fully supported by all sectors of its government, especially by the military.
- North Korea must cease all acts of military brinkmanship. This will not be tolerated, and any such acts may cause our nation to suspend its support of, and participation in, this or any other diplomatic process to include any inter-Korean talks. The current level of JP-ROK-U.S. military exercises, and THAAD, will be retained and sustained as long as the North's nuclear weapons and ballistic missile programs continue to exist.
- At an appropriate time, Pyongyang, Seoul and Washington will start separate negotiations on a peace treaty to formally end the Korean War.
- At an appropriate time, we will begin negotiations on the reunification of the Korean peninsula to create united and eminently stronger Korean nation.

Red Flags

- Any bad behavior on the part of the North Korean government.
- Any indication that North Korea would be allowed to maintain any part of its nuclear program or ballistic missile systems.

Delegation Instructions

Ensure periodic reports, requests for further guidance, or clarifications to the instructions herein are submitted via message to the office of the Foreign Minister.

We seek a stable Korean peninsula and a stable, prosperous, and responsible North Korean nation that works in harmony with the world. Once the DPRK transforms itself into a responsible nation, we will look toward reunifying the peninsula, at an appropriate future time, as a single Korean nation under a single flag. The strength and vitality of a reunified Korea would be unprecedented and would raise and inspire all our people and create a nation that would rightfully rival all other nations in the region. Read our "2024 Unification Ministry's Key Policy Agenda" in the references link of the main scenario document.

The DPRK should never be allowed to possess a nuclear program of any type, or to possess an offensive ballistic missile capability. To that end, we will work in unison with our U.S. and Japanese partners to ensure that these capabilities are terminated in a peaceful manner through a negotiated agreement as part of a comprehensive agreement with North Korea.

Work in tandem with the American and Japanese delegations to maintain our joint position on the need for a comprehensive agreement covering all the issues cited in the Chairman's Framework for the Six-Party Talks. If this approach shows no promise, or progress, then we should propose a different path toward resolution of this situation. Initially we should seek to revive discussions held in 2018 on a joint set of economic projects that would link both our nations through new road and rail infrastructure. These would only take place after the North's nuclear and missile programs are eliminated. Sanctions relief, and humanitarian assistance under WHO auspices, could also be granted at an agreed point in the dismantlement of the North's nuclear and missile programs. Such an expansive offering may be the encouragement that Pyongyang needs to act in good faith on rapidly ending their nuclear weapons and ballistic missile programs.

Regarding China's 'mutual freeze' proposal – the suspension of JP-ROK-U.S. training exercises in exchange for the North halting progress on its nuclear and missile programs – we cannot and will not support such an action. We see a freeze of the North's nuclear program as potentially unverifiable, locking in the capabilities that Pyongyang has already achieved. This would do nothing to lessen the present North Korean threat. Freezing, or in essence, cancelling JP-ROK-U.S. training and exercises for an undetermined period will substantially degrade necessary command coordination and military preparation and readiness essential for the defense of our nation. A freeze will not be the neutral event Beijing claims, but one that would work in favor of the DPRK.

North Korea must rein in its military and cease any, and all, provocative acts. These acts are used to sabotage and destroy confidence-building efforts that are essential to these talks by not allowing them to continue and progress. With regards confidence-building, we propose that our delegates, and those from Pyongyang, resume our promising North-South dialogue that was begun in 2018. Either within these talks, or separately, and without preconditions to explore establishing a permanent peace between our two nations. If these talks make progress, we should look to include U.S. representatives to discuss steps to negotiate a formal end to the Korean War. From that point, talks on the reunification of the peninsula could be broached, but use caution. Ensure the North does see bilateral talks as a pretense to erode our alliance with the United States or to divide the unified positions we hold with Washington and Tokyo.

Not only must the North's nuclear weapon and ballistic missile programs be disabled and terminated, but an agreement on nonproliferation must be part of the comprehensive agreement. If this is not done, and enforced, it is likely that the North will continue to sell material and knowledge to other nations and/or groups looking to build their own nuclear capability. This cannot be allowed to continue.

While we are not opposed to providing Light Water Reactors (LWRs) to North Korea, within the tenets of a comprehensive agreement, this is best done in accordance with the previous agreements. The reestablishment of the Korean Energy Development Organization (KEDO), the North's return to the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty (NPT), and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) will assure that the North will comply with its responsibilities in the operation of the LWRs. As an alternative to this, we invite Russia and China to initiate a comprehensive program to provision needed electrical power to the DPRK, either through direct transmission, or through the construction of conventional power plants and power transmission infrastructure.

An additional set of issues, not currently outlined in the Chairman's Framework, but that Washington wishes to pursue, is to end the North's chemical and cyber warfare capabilities. Unlike the nuclear and missile programs, where testing and capability demonstrations are as they have taken those programs, Pyongyang has supplied chemical weapons, or their components, to countries that have used them against their own people (Syria), and even used VX nerve agent to assassinate Kim Jong-un's half-brother. Over the past several years, Pyongyang has employed its offense cyber capabilities to attack vulnerable targets around the world. Therefore, these additional threats need to be addressed. However, your guidance is that the U.S. delegation cannot adamantly pursue these additional issues that doing so might cause these talks to fail. On this last point, the Japanese delegation and we agree: adding issues outside of the Chairman's Framework cannot be done if doing so might derail these talks.

Lastly, while neither our nation, nor the United States, shares the deep animus that Japan feels regarding the abduction of its citizens by the DPRK in the 1970s and 1980s, we both have more than enough reason to sympathize with its position on this issue. However, as has been the case concerning outside topics with our nation and with Washington, these issues are best addressed through bilateral discussions and negotiations between Tokyo and Pyongyang. However, if the Japanese remain insistent that this issue must be addressed, we will lend support to Tokyo's arguments while simultaneously pushing both Pyongyang and Tokyo to conduct separate bilateral talks.
